

Wocket's Wheeless Wagon

BOW-TOP INTERIOR

Cross-section facing rear

Plan

The exterior of the wagon is solid green-painted wood; A small collapsible ladder. Hangs down at the front allowing correct-height people to enter easily when levitated. Inside the wagon the cabinetwork is dark red polished mahogany, and the walls are grained in light-golden brown. The atmosphere is snug and homely. The fire in the stove, if built up with windows closed for half an hour, will so heat the metal rails near the roof that they will be too hot to hold.

The entrance is frontal and half-doored. Through it, and on your immediate left, you find a tall, narrow clothes wardrobe and beneath it perhaps a small brush cupboard. The fireplace stands next, and is on the left as you enter. From a point about two feet above the top of the stove, the fireplace is boxed in to form an airing cupboard. On the front of this cupboard and above the fireplace is a brass-railed shelf and next comes the offside window, and beneath a seat for two. The seat flips over to reveal a workbench with attached alchemical workbench setup. This is also where any valuables are stored and it can be secured with four simple locks and is always arcane locked.

To the right, as you enter, is a bow-fronted corner cupboard; the top part, having glass doors, displays a variety of labeled alchemical tools, vials and similar paraphernalia, and the cupboard below is for boots and cleaning gear. Opposite the fire there is another locker seat. Next to the seat is a bow-fronted chest of drawers containing personal items, writing implements, sewing kits, jugs, cups, and the like.

Section facing off side

Across the back of the van is a two-berthed bed-place, the top bunk just below the single rear window, and beneath it are two sliding doors. Inside is space for a second sleeper bed, but this space typically contains larger items (spades, shovels, tents, etc.) and food storage. Light is supplied from a bracket above the chest of drawers, into which a continual light torch is often placed. The ceiling, especially near the back area, has many small hooks and bags and areas for putting small and medium sized items.

Although the ceiling is 6' in height, the top 2' near the ceiling is too full of bags, tied-up blankets and the like to be walked under by over-height races. WeenWocket is typically to be found somewhere up there.

Section facing near side

Attached to the back of the wagon, leaving only just enough space for two people to sit are the largest items in the wagon; a sled, a medium-sized barrel (kept full of water via create water). Alongside the wagon sides are a 10' pole and a 10' ladder. Just before settling the wagon, blocks in the corners of the wagon are pulled out so it does not rest directly on the ground, but instead is 2-4" off the ground (depending on how hard the ground is ...)
